

Your end-of-day numbers — what each one means

Thirty seconds a night on your personal link. Every box now has its definition printed right under it — this sheet is the same thing in one place, so everyone counts the same way. Everything is today only.

METRIC	WHAT COUNTS
Dials	Phone call attempts you made today. Every attempt counts — no-answers and voicemails included.
Pick ups	Dials where a human answered and you actually spoke, even briefly. Voicemails don't count. (Can't be more than dials.)
Sets	New sales calls you booked today — the prospect committed and a time was locked in.
New leads hit	Brand-new leads you contacted for the first time today.
Follow ups	Existing leads you re-contacted today (not first touches).
Calls on the calendar	First consults from YOUR sets that were scheduled to happen today — whenever you set them. Not your upcoming pipeline, and not "sets I made today."
Calls shown	Of those — how many prospects actually showed up. (Can't be more than calls on the calendar.)
Calls closed	Of today's shows, how many closed. (Can't be more than calls shown.)

Three rules that keep everyone's numbers honest:

- Today only. Every box is about today — the form is a snapshot of one day, not your pipeline.
- First consults only. Follow-up calls and second calls never count in "calls on the calendar" or "calls shown" — those belong to the closers' numbers. If a prospect you set shows to a follow-up, that's already counted elsewhere.
- Blank means "not reporting." Leaving a box empty is fine — it means you're not claiming a number. Typing 0 means "the real answer is zero." They're different.

What your form looks like now

Same form, same 30 seconds — each box just carries its reminder now, so you never have to guess what's being asked.

The form will also stop you if the math can't be right (for example, more calls shown than were on the calendar) and tell you why — that's not an error on your end, it's the form catching a miscount before it hits the board.

Submitting again on the same day simply replaces that day's numbers, so a correction is just a resubmit.

Demo Setter — end of day
2026-09-01

Dials (phone call attempts today — every attempt counts, incl. no-answers)

Pick ups (dials where a human answered and you spoke)

Sets (new sales calls you booked today — prospect committed, time locked in)

New leads hit (brand-new leads you contacted for the first time today)

Follow ups (existing leads you re-contacted today)

Calls on the calendar (first consults from YOUR sets that were scheduled for today)

Calls shown (of those, how many showed — follow-ups / second calls don't count)

Calls closed (of today's shows, how many closed)

Anything else (optional)

Submit

Your nightly form, with the reminders built in.